New Tokyo, 2121

In place of weakened states, a small number of corporations began to support and govern the people.

Around the end of the 20th century, most of the countries formerly known as "developed nations" had devolved into lawless zones where crime syndicates and megacorporations battled for dominance.

New Tokyo, Ward 42 (Formerly Kawasaki City)

Money and people flooding in from both domestically and abroad rapidly eroded order, and crime became integrated into the daily lives of the populace.

Japan entered its second high-growth period, and its urban areas expanded uncontrollably.

A revolution in medical and cybernetic technology, sparked by a certain Japanese corporation, led to a population boom.

One of the world's foremost mega-cities came to be known as the Demon Capital, New Tokyo.

There was movement.

The city once called Edo

No problem.

There's no exit on the other side, is there?

I'll infiltrate from the other side of the dock... it should be unguarded.

It was getting noisy near the aerial dock on the 32nd floor.

I have a bad feeling about this.

If we're on guard duty, the hostages will be put in danger.

Alone...? Riot police won't move until the evacuation is complete?

The unseen watchdog of a dying Japanese government.

I'm operating as the Special Ninjutsu Unit of the Public Security Bureau's First Division.

Infiltration successful.

Radio silence.

We've lost contact with the guys at the docks

I don't understand!

What's going on!!

One of the hostages?

Tch

They headed for the docks and haven't responded

Damn... the signal is blocked inside this building... Where's the security?

Soldiers... or gangsters?

Not corporate security

No, I don't know the situation yet

Should I contact the boss? This terminal can connect to an outside line

I'll do the reporting, okay?

Y-yes!

I'll go, got it.
Huh?
First, go to the lab and check on the situation.

Huh?

Guh...

Wham!

Are you hurt?

Ah!

What is this feeling?

I've come to help you.

I'm with the police... sort of!

It's okay!

I don't know.

By the way,

Did you do this?

I'm remembering 'that day' again.

I learned ninja techniques,

I became stronger.

It's fine! No one will know if you sneak a bite!

And yet every night I have nightmares of 'that day'

I'll take care of it! Please!

Please! My daughter...! Don't do anything terrible to my daughter!

You make such a mess, they'll know right away.

My daughter

You gotta hack properly and do it smoothly.

On 'that day,' unknown men broke into our home.

My new tools are super effective!

Hmph.

Mom!

I am the dick that will enter your pussy from now on.

Tch! This cyber-hack response feels fishy!

It's unconventional, but

Hello, this is Shindo El from DAHOOTCH.

First of all, thank you very much for reading this doujinshi. This is an afterword written before the main text is complete, as usual.

This is a cyberpunk ninja story. I was originally planning to draw a "Taimanin" book, but I was told no, so I reluctantly made it an original work.

When it's an original work, I get anxious about whether the action scenes I wanted to draw loosely will be fun to read. With fanfiction, even if some parts are boring, they can still hold the reader's attention. I feel like if my original characters are running around chaotically, people will just think, "So what?" and I'll end up hating drawing it midway through. It's scary.

I've been drawing Taimanin bit by bit for several years and I'm happy that I've created characters with designs that are somewhat well-liked. On the other hand, it makes me sad that if the copyright holder doesn't promote them, they're pretty much treated as disposable. Even so, there are people who say they like my characters, so I'm filled with the desire to keep providing new works, but it's frustrating that I can't provide them by my own judgment.

When I think about it that way, drawing original works should be the best, but even if I release it like this, whether people will come to like this work and these characters is like a gamble. Even if I have the motivation, I still don't know if it will bear fruit.

And so, please look forward to it.

We appreciate your continued support.
